

Yet to be titled

by Writing Android

Category: PokÃ©mon

Genre: Adventure, Friendship

Language: English

Characters: Bisharp/Kirikizan, Gardevoir/Sirknight, Lucario

Status: In-Progress

Published: 2016-04-14 05:29:57

Updated: 2016-04-14 05:29:57

Packaged: 2016-04-27 18:20:22

Rating: K+

Chapters: 1

Words: 654

Publisher: www.fanfiction.net

Summary: A homewardbound sailor gets intercepted and an adventure begins. Join him in his endevors. No title ideas, sorry. K plus for now, but it may go up.

Yet to be titled

This was written when I had Writer's Block. It's nothing special. However, I wish to re do it so PLEEEAAASE be patient for a revise version! See it as a trailer/teaser, but dont expect much, im not very confident itll be great. Go to my profiles on stuff if I put any.

* * *

>The tale begins out at sea. Lucario was sailing his ship towards his hometown to reunite with his family after so long. His blue coat flowing in the breeze along with his black hair, his crimson eyes looking over the horizon, and his hands steady on the wheel. A parrot landed upon his shoulder carrying a rolled up parchment. "Ah, my darling Kira." he greeted, "You've done your job as always." He unrolled the message and read it to himself. "Good to hear they're happily waiting for me." "Look out!" squawked Kira. Lucario looked in the direction she was and saw the ship of the most feared pirate of the seas, Captain Bisharp. Many cower from his yellow eyes and red hair, but all fear his blades, that rumors say come from his wrists. "Ahoy lad!" he called, "Stop ye boat and be ready to hand over yer treasure!" The lone sailor wasn't far from home, but the pirates were closing in fast. Stay and fight likely to death or speed up and endanger the town, these were his options. He sighed and quickly wrote a response off with Kira flying away. Lucario held up his hands as planks were set as the looters ran across to start raiding. Bisharp walked over and stood in front of him.

"Smart man. As a token of appriication, I invite ye to be in me crew." The captain held out a hand. "Ye'll get all the gold in the world."

"In return, can you please spare my family if you happen to plunder my hometown?" He shows a picture of his parents and little brother with him.

"Crew! If ye see these landlubbers, leave them be!" He turned back to him putting the hand back out. "I keep my end of deals lad."

Lucario takes it reluctantly. "Thank you, I suppose."

"'Tis nothing fer me new crewmate! Yer parrot showed us where they be, but as per the deal, we won't go. Now, go rest." With that, he walked away into his cabin.

Lucario sat on a bed and looked out the window. "I hope that...Bisharp keeps that promise." he whispered. As he lied down to sleep, the door opened. "Hello?" came a voice. He sat up again. "Hello?" "Oh! The new guy!" A pirate with an eyepatch walked in and shut the door. "What brings you here so late?" "Well, pirates don't follow standards for one and..." It took off the eyepatch and bandana revealing green hair and the other eye. "Name's Gardevoir, but they know me as 'Gallade'." "Lucario." "Nice to meet ya. As for why I'm throwing this on you suddenly..." She grew a serious expression. "Captain Bisharp doesn't keep promises. He kidnapped me when my father joined me, even though he said he wouldn't do anything. I nearly escaped...what they were planning by acting as a new crew member and convincing that I "got away" somehow. Please trust me, and I request you don't reveal who I am. Please." She looked at him with hands clasped. "I sense truth in you. Very well. I trust you and I will take the secret down with me." She lightly clapped in joy and smiled putting the bit of disguise back on, switching back to the voice she had before. "Thanks." Afterwards, he flopped back into bed and got some rest.

* * *

>And...idek what my brain popped out. Hope you enjoyed. If this gets like...25 reads, I'll try continuing.

They retain pokÃ©mon names but are human.

End
file.